

April 30, 2017

To: Interested Parties
From: Anzalone Liszt Grove Research
Re: Poll Results in Georgia's 6th Congressional District

The race for Georgia's 6th congressional election remains close, with Democrat Jon Ossoff narrowly leading Republican Karen Handel by only one point (48% Ossoff / 47% Handel).

Part of Ossoff's success in earning 48% in the April special election was his ability to drive turnout among voters who do not typically vote in special elections or midterms. According to voter file results, 25% of all voters who participated in the April special election voted in 2016, but had not voted in 2014. In the current polling of run-off voters, Ossoff holds a 12-point lead over Handel among these voters.

The poll was conducted by Anzalone Liszt Grove Research on April 23-26, 2017 among N=590 likely June run-off voters. The survey is subject to a margin of error of 4.0 percentage points.